

Even Nashoba lawmaker doesn't know where the hell Nashoba is
– Page D

The Oklahoma Real-ass issues. Fake-ass news Partisan

Obese kids, hungry cows:
State crisis solves itself
– Page R

Volume 1, Issue 8, Photocopy freely

Subscribe for free by e-mail:
governorjackwalton@hotmail.com

Lincoln Street hookers pushing for longer legislative session

OKLAHOMA CITY (OP) – As the Legislature enters its last week of the regular session, hookers along the “Capitol Corridor” are shoring up for the lean summer months. However, with term limits carrying off many repeat customers, the president of the Prostitutes Local 24601 says the union may lobby for a longer legislative session.

“The Legislature is constitutionally mandated to adjourn in May,” said Gertie Cummings, part-time lobbyist and full-time whore. “This hasn’t been a problem in the past, because we had some big spenders. However, a 12-year term limit can create big problems within the industry, since it can take up to a year to convince some of the younger lawmakers that their wives will never find out.”

Cummings said the union is pushing for a constitutional amendment to extend the legislative session through the end of July.

Sexual tension between Balkman, Cargill approaching dangerous levels

OKLAHOMA CITY (OP) – On Tuesday, legislators were told of the rising sexual tension between Rep. Thad Balkman, R-Norman, and Rep. Lance Cargill, R-Harrah.

The two representatives are frequent collaborators, often issuing joint press releases and addressing the media together. Most recently, the dynamic duo issued a press release calling on the Democratic Party to cancel a gay marriage event and “endorse efforts to amend the state constitution to prohibit gay marriage.”

“They’re always together, talking about Oklahoma values and capital gains tax cuts,” said House staffer Gordon MacRae, “It’s so obvious, everyone in the Capitol knows it.”

Former House page Gloria Grahame was more direct, “I wish they’d just kiss already.”

While most at the Capitol agree that Balkman and Cargill would make a good couple, the rising tension is not without danger, said Oklahoma fire marshal Robert Doke.

“Whenever Balkman and Cargill get together, the sparks start flying. And when you’ve got a Capitol surrounded by oil wells, flying sparks is not something you want to deal with,” said Doke.

To ease some of the tension between the two, Doke suggested having a House staffer hose them down between particularly intense caucus sessions. Sen. Scott Pruitt, R-Broken Arrow, has also offered to chaperone the two to ensure that everything remains copacetic.

Former senator Gene Stipe is on the lam following four months of house arrest. Stipe made his break while his wife was watching “Matlock.”

Stipe escapes house arrest

Police urge caution; Former senator last seen making illegal campaign contributions south of McAlester

By Martin Trapp, Partisan Staff Reporter

Former senator and convicted felon Gene Stipe escaped from house arrest on Monday, slipping out the back door while his wife was watching daytime TV. Stipe’s checkbook was also missing, which concerns authorities.

“As of right now, we believe the fugitive to be hiding somewhere in the McAlester area,” said Pittsburg County sheriff Jerome Amaranto. “We’re concerned that he might try to funnel illegal donations into a city council race, or possibly contribute to the campaign coffers of Mike Mass.”

In January, Stipe was sentenced for perjury, conspiracy to obstruct a Federal Election Commission investigation and conspiracy to violate the Federal Election Campaign Act. During the sentencing process, which was delayed six times, many sought jail time for the 77-year-old lawmaker. An exception was Sen. Frank Shurden, D-Henryetta, who recommended castration.

In other news...

– Senator calls for special session to finish farewell speech

– Governor ‘doing well’ following spine-removal surgery

– Cain collapses from bleeding heart