

Seeking to lower drug costs,
state stoners asking to re-import pot from Canada
– Page D

The Oklahoma Real-ass issues. Fake-ass news Partisan

Volume 2, Issue 5, Photocopy freely

Commissioners say new e-bribe system will speed up county operations
– Page R

Subscribe for free by e-mail:
governorjackwalton@gmail.com

EXCLUSIVE!!

PARTISAN UNCOVERS HOMOSEXUAL AGENDA

Bill makes Democratic Party Oklahoma's official dinosaur

OKLAHOMA CITY (OP) – Last week, the Senate voted to make the Democratic Party, politicus obsoletum, Oklahoma's official dinosaur. Senate Concurrent Resolution 3, by Sen. Jeff Rabon, D-Hugo, is designed to give the beast its proper place in state history.

"Like the dinosaurs, the Oklahoma Democratic Party ruled for generations, yet ultimately became extinct when it failed to evolve," said Rabon. "It was also notable for having a huge, lumbering body and a brain the size of a walnut."

The resolution passed unanimously, but not before Republicans added a small amendment on the Senate floor, correcting a scrivener's error which had implied Earth was more than 6,000 years old.

Sen. Jeff Rabon
D-Hugo

Senator calling for bipartisan approach to voting Republican

OKLAHOMA CITY (OP) – In a press conference last week, Sen. Glenn Coffee called for an end to "business as usual" in state government.

"For too long, the legislature has been bogged down in ugly, partisan disputes," said Coffee, R-Oklahoma City. "It is time to put the politics of division behind us. Now is time to work with the Democrats, and take a truly bipartisan approach to voting Republican."

From the Senate's college bond proposal to the House's workers compensation reforms, conflicts between the GOP and Democrats have marred the legislative process. Coffee said it was time for lawmakers to reach across the aisle, and work hand-in-hand to unquestionably advance GOP proposals.

"As politicians, we talk about 'bipartisanship' all the time, yet will still see some lawmakers trying to thwart the process with their opposing opinions," said Coffee. "I'm challenging my colleagues in the Senate and House to stand together, and say that we won't let ugly, partisan politics keep us from voting Republican."

Sen. Glenn Coffee
R-Oklahoma City

Teacher's union reports little success from 'Kick Your Lawmaker in the Crotch' Day

OKLAHOMA CITY (OP) – Officials for the Oklahoma Education Association are concerned that "Kick Your Lawmaker in the Crotch" Day is not producing the results they desire.

At the annual event, teachers from across the state rally at the Capitol. They then proceed to assault lawmakers, striking them between the legs and below the waistline as a way of drawing attention to educational issues facing the state.

"In the past, a swift kick to the groin has been good way to get someone's attention," said Daisy Perosco, an official for the organization. "Once (lawmakers) are rolling and screaming on the ground, we can make our case for the importance of hiking teacher benefits."

However, some are concerned that the event has yielded diminishing returns.

Rep. Tad Jones, R-Claremore, is the chair of the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Education. He has generally avoided teachers following a "meeting" that left him walking funny for a week.

Rep. Mark Liotta, R-Tulsa, collects a crotchful of foot from a state teacher outside the Capitol.

Perosco said the organization is looking into more effective lobbying efforts, and plans to sponsor "Go Medieval on Their Ass" day next year.